

INSENSYS RECEIVES ISO 9001:2008 New Quality Management System Certificate Awarded to Insensys

August 12, 2009 – Insensys has recently achieved the latest quality management certificate, ISO 9001:2008. This new standard was introduced in 2008 as a global rating of quality developed by the International Organisation for Standardisation.

Providing an international reference for quality management requirements as well as any regulatory obligations of the company's industry, ISO 9001:2008 has a stringent certification process that investigates all aspects of the business to ensure that internal systems can deliver continually improving products and services.

Comments Toby King, Insensys CEO; "ISO 9001:2008 is an important mark of our commitment to outstanding levels of client service and increased customer satisfaction levels. It demonstrates the company's efficient and reliable working procedures and reflects a continued dedication to ongoing improvement. We are particularly proud of this quality award as we achieved it without any non-conformances."

Insensys also achieved OHSAS 18001:2007 health and safety certification this July. An award of this standard requires top-level commitment to compliance with legislation, prevention of accidents, promotion of good health and continual improvement.
